In this paper, we have tried to follow a thorough and systematic approach to the study of the effect of various metal catalysts on the catalytic and selective reduction of succinyl compounds. The results show that succinyl compounds are reduced to the corresponding aldehydes, ketones, and carboxylic acids by the use of NaBH₄ and LiBH₄. The reduction of succinyl compounds is more effective than the reduction of the corresponding aldehydes, ketones, and carboxylic acids. The reduction of reduction of the corresponding aldehydes, ketones,
